

5 REASONS TO HIRE A SSD LAWYER

Social Security Disability

“When you’re faced with an unfamiliar battle, one with bad odds and high stakes, you don’t try to face it alone. You hire someone with experience – someone who will fight for you.”

-Rocky McElhaney

- 1 They see the big picture. Great disability attorneys are already aware of pitfalls and loopholes specific to your claim and your injuries. They can help you avoid bumps in the road that you might not know how to look for on your own.
- 2 They know how to prove your injuries. Each injury is different in terms of how it impacts a person and what limitations it causes. An experienced attorney knows how to use their knowledge about the injury to prove you are disabled.
- 3 They’re good hunters and gatherers. A skilled attorney knows what medical evidence to gather, can help you hunt down elusive records from your past, and can recognize when you need additional exams or tests, or when your medical records need updating.
- 4 They know what to say. A skilled attorney will prepare you for questioning at the hearing and will be prepared themselves to cross-examine the Social Security Administration’s vocational expert and use their testimony to help prove your claim.
- 5 They do all the work. One of the hardest parts about dealing fighting for your SSD benefits on your own is the worry, and all the leg work. A compassionate and diligent legal team will take that burden off your shoulders, so you can focus on your own personal wellness, recovery, retirement, and future.
